1. The rapid advancement of Andrey Antonovich Grechko, Sergey Semenovitch Biryuzov, and Kirill Semenovitch Moskalenko is a result of the fact that the Presidium wants as many military men as possible on its side. These marshals have been in the West and know the problems which would be encountered there in the event of war.
2. In the Soviet Union there are a large number of artillerymen among the marshals because the overall policy in Soviet military circles is that "artillery is the god of war". The Soviet staff values artillery, and many artillery officers are promoted to the rank of marshal.
